Activity: Your own rights-based approach
Theme: Becoming a Youth Rights Champion

In order to become a Youth Rights Champion, we are asking you to support a group of young people you work with to develop their own rights-based approach that can be applied at your work place. This is an opportunity to hear directly from young people about what's working and where things can be improved. This activity is based on the format our own rights-based infographic so we have provided a blank template for you to use on page two.

Follow the steps below to create your own rights-based approach.

1

Share the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child to ensure young people know their rights and our infographic so they can see how other young people have interpreted some of these rights.

2

Ask young people to choose which rights/articles they want to interpret. Put one article in each of the bubbles. You can print out multiple sheets if needed.

3

Now ask the young people to decide what it would look like to have these rights fully met. Use the text boxes attached to the bubbles to write these out.

Finally, use the boxes at the top of the page to decide who is responsible for making this happen and how you will know if it's working*. Nobody can do this alone so it's worth discussing this with your colleagues and managers.

Don't forget to send a copy to us with your application to become a Youth Rights Champion.

WE'RE ALL RIGHT

a RIGHTS-BASED approach to supporting YOUNG PEOPLE

use the bubbles to choose which rights are most important to you use the boxes to explain how it looks when your rights are upheld

use the stars for quotes

Who created this approach?

Where will this be used?

Who is responsible for making it work?

How will you know if it's working?

*If you want to include more rights, you can print out multiple copies of this sheet and cut along the dotted line
